Expecting the Unexpected

Last week as my fingers were busily flying across the keyboard I inadvertently caused my first Pastor's Pen article from July 18, 2016 to pop up so I took some time to read it. I noted that in my first month on the job that everyone had been welcoming and positive, making us feel at home. I wrote that I sensed a real heart-felt desire to be a church that is relevant and one that makes a difference in the community. The article reminded me that in my very first week of being your pastor I got a request from the funeral director at Kosec's Funeral Home to perform a Celebration of Life for someone who had just passed away and did not have a home church. The man's daughter wanted a service, wasn't from here, and asked for a recommendation for a pastor who would be willing to do the service. The funeral home director knew me from my days as the County Coroner and gave me a call. And then, after I had prepared my second sermon, four Dallas police officers were shot and I felt that the matter warranted addressing from the pulpit so I shelved the already-written sermon and wrote a new one. These were things not covered in my Certified Lay Ministry training. Expect the unexpected.

Well, I'm more than halfway through year six of my ministry and I can say that some of the job is what I expected but a lot of it has been unexpected. I mean who would have anticipated a pandemic that would close our doors for over a year? Many of the books I read in anticipation of taking on this new profession talked earnestly and matter-of-factly about the decline of mainline denominations and the struggle to keep church doors open. One of the books I read was entitled: A Methodist Requiem by William B. Lawrence. Not a very cheerful title but early on in the book the author made the point that we, the Methodist Church, had lost its footprint in the community. Nobody knew who we were, where we were, and what we stood for. Our job, he said, was to reestablish that footprint through engagement in the community. Well that stuck with me. He pointed out that relevancy is why Methodism was born in the first place when John Wesley realized that his church, the Church of England, was not living up to the Gospel of Jesus Christ. And several hundred years later the author is saying that people no longer see us as relevant.

And this brings me back to my first Pastor's Pen article where I wrote about the sense I got that this church wanted to be relevant and make a difference in the community. And here we are five and half years later and I don't think anyone can say we aren't relevant, that we aren't making a difference in the community. We have come a long way in reestablishing our footprint in the community. They know who we are, where we are, and what we stand for.

As I wander around the church taking inventory I can truly say that what I see was truly unexpected but it is without a doubt a part of God's plan for his church in this community. What we have been able to accomplish would not have been possible without the support of many people, some who have gone on but believed in this church. What we have done has strengthened the faith of many who have invested their lives in this community and see this church as a part of their legacy. And, as a part of God's plan, our renewed relevance has attracted new people to our congregation as they look for a church that is relevant, one that practices what it preaches. They are looking for a church that expects the unexpected and knows what to do when it happens.

Faithfully, Scott

New cooktop for parsonage

The Parsonage Project

By Scott Rosekrans

In January our tenants moved out of the parsonage which gave us an opportunity to get in there and see what needed to be done to bring it up to date. It had been quite some time since the interior had been painted so we put a nice fresh coat of paint on the walls which really brightened it up. We also replaced the ceiling fixtures with updated lighting and replaced the wall plates. In the kitchen we installed a new cooktop and vent hood. Once we replace the flooring in the kitchen and entryway the top floor will be finished. The bottom floor still needs painting and new light fixtures. We really appreciate those who stepped forward and answered the call for donations (both cash and in-kind) which helped update the upstairs at no cost to the church. Hopefully in the next couple of weeks we'll have an open house so you can drop in and see what's been done. The parsonage is a great asset to the church and we must be good stewards of it, especially as it is currently being used as a rental for people who are looking for housing.

Success and Sacrifice

1 John 3:16

February 8, 2022

By Jennifer Benson Schuldt

During a summer study program, my son read a book about a boy who wanted to climb an Alpine mountain in Switzerland. Practicing for this goal occupied most of his time. When he finally set off for the summit, things didn't go as planned. Partway up the slope, a teammate became sick and the boy decided to stay behind to help instead of achieving his goal.

In the classroom, my son's teacher asked, "Was the main character a failure because he didn't climb the mountain?" One student said, "Yes, because it was in his DNA to fail." But another child disagreed. He reasoned that the boy was not a failure, because he gave up something important to help someone else.

When we set aside our plans and care for others instead, we're acting like Jesus. Jesus sacrificed having a home, reliable income, and social acceptance to travel and share God's truth. Ultimately, He gave up His life to free us from sin and show us God's love (1 John 3:16).

Earthly success is much different from success in God's eyes. He values the compassion that moves us to rescue disadvantaged and hurting people (v.17). He approves of decisions that protect people. With God's help, we can align our values with His and devote ourselves to loving Him and others, which is the most significant achievement there is.
